

MESSAGE

Hong Kong's aim is to become Asia's world city which requires a transformation in the way we manage and deliver public services.

When opening a conference on "A Civil Service for Asia's World City" for senior civil servants earlier this year, the Chief Secretary for Administration underlined the Government's commitment to this transformation. She defined a clear vision of the way in which Government would manage and deliver public services by say 2005, that embraced four key elements - excellent customer service, managing for results by results, securing joined-up government, and achieving world-class productivity.

The Efficiency Unit (EU) co-ordinates and resources a programme of work to help deliver this vision. Although primary responsibility rests with policy secretaries, heads of departments and senior management across Government for the necessary improvements in services and productivity, the EU is committed to supporting all those involved in change with ideas, experience and practical assistance.

The last year has seen many of EU's programmes and initiatives come to fruition, thus moving forward the Serving the Community agenda. We have ensured that the second phase of the Enhanced Productivity Programme addresses the required step jump in Government performance. At the same time, Government is making increasing use of clear objectives, measures and targets to focus its efforts and resources on delivering defined outcomes for the community. Looking forward, exploiting technology (including the Internet) and leveraging private sector involvement will be priorities for the EU in the coming year.

Continuous Improvement in Public Services

Policy Objective
and
Key Result Areas

CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT IN PUBLIC SERVICES

Our Policy Objective is to promote a measurable transformation in the management and delivery of public services so that community needs are met in the most effective and efficient manner.

Overall Targets

In pursuing this objective, we target overall improvements in Government's customer service and productivity. We continued to work to develop overall measures which can be used to track improvements.

In the meantime, we have set targets in terms of the progress of the Serving the Community agenda, which include –

- Providing managers with the necessary tools, support and research of best practice to enable them to:
 - develop clear objectives, targets and performance measures
 - maintain high standards of customer service
 - optimise private sector involvement
 - exploit the potential of information technology
- Working with resource bureaux to increase the authority and flexibility to enable them to maximise the value from resources expended
- Building support across Government for the Serving the Community Programme

Progress

In drawing up this year's Policy Objective, we have reviewed the four Key Result Areas (KRAs) in the 1999 booklet, and have re-defined them to form three KRAs. This rationalisation presents a clearer flow of the work undertaken by the Efficiency Unit (EU). We have also incorporated appropriate initiatives on private sector involvement and corporatisation as we have taken on these responsibilities from the Business and Services Promotion Unit (BSPU) now grouped under the Commerce and Industry Bureau.

We have continued to progress improvements in public services through our key programmes with particular success in respect of performance measurement. This has led to managers focusing much more on outputs and outcomes in a drive for productivity improvement and an increasing use of customer feedback to improve the quality of service.

We have also secured funding approval to proceed with a call centre project for environmental hazards and cleanliness. This project will target significant improvements in the quality and productivity of customer enquiries and complaints handling. The longer term vision is to expand this approach across Government. Many other smaller projects and enhancements have been implemented during the year and these are covered in more detail under the various KRAs and initiatives described in this booklet.

We also achieved the following progress in our three KRAs.

1 Identify opportunities

We continued to search for opportunities to increase public sector productivity in order to release more resources to meet community needs. To do this, we focused on three elements: opportunities to redirect resources to best effect in delivering Government's key policies and priorities; opportunities to re-engineer front line services to exploit new technologies and processes; and opportunities to draw lessons from the private sector and other governments on how to secure best value from support services.

We continued to expand our database of best practice in each area and are using EU's Internet web page as an effective interactive tool for collecting and disseminating information.

We hosted the Eastern Regional Organization for Public Administration (EROPA) Hong Kong Conference in October 2000, which was well attended by local and overseas participants in the Asia-Pacific region. The Conference provided a useful forum to share best practice in the management and delivery of public services. It allowed us to spread the Public Sector Reform (PSR) messages to the Hong Kong civil servants attending and to build further contacts with other governments.

We have identified a number of opportunities to bring together new technology and private sector involvement, including corporatisation, as a means of transforming the way we deliver services. We also continue to explore with the Information Technology and Broadcasting Bureau a wide range of e-Government opportunities now being opened up by technology. The potential for significant further improvement by applying such emerging techniques is large and exciting.

2 Develop proposals and secure support

Three Fundamental Expenditure Reviews (FERs) have been completed with EU's support. These have taken a top down policy-driven approach, focusing on what Government is really trying to achieve in each area, and the most effective strategies and resource allocation to maximise results. Such reviews have revealed significant opportunities to redirect resources to better effect and more are planned in future.

Feasibility studies were conducted into the benefits of institutional change for a number of departments as well as the opportunities for increasing the visibility of full costs within Government as a tool to help managers maximise value for money. We will continue to focus on increasing the visibility of costs to departments particularly in respect of support services and accommodation.

We have also assisted a number of departments in developing proposals to facilitate greater private sector participation in the delivery of services. We will continue to support and encourage departments to explore outsourcing options to enhance productivity and service quality.

Effective communications to build awareness of the need for improvement, and support for PSR, remain a key element of EU's programme. This year we used the outcome of an earlier communications review as the basis for developing a structured Government-wide Communications Programme. The programme, to be applied to all projects launched by the EU, helps us to target our efforts in terms of objectives, messages, audiences and media. The conference on "A Civil Service for Asia's World City" in the first week of the new millennium was a major element of our communications effort. We were also able to use the EROPA Hong Kong Conference in October 2000 to great effect.

3 Implement programmes and monitor results

The ultimate measure of success for this KRA is evidence that the proposals we have implemented have led to an improvement in customer service and productivity, and thus contributed to the achievement of the overall Policy Objective. One way in which we seek to measure this success is to conduct post-implementation review of various improvement initiatives to see if planned improvements have filtered through into practice.

Last year we reviewed bureaux' and departments' response to the Target-based Management Process (TMP) and the Performance Review System and were pleasantly surprised at the extent to which both approaches are now being filtered into day-to-day management practice. Obviously there is still some way to go but it is clear that Government's thinking has moved much more towards setting objectives in output and outcome terms and monitoring performance against targets. We will continue to refine these systems in the light of feedback from users with a view to developing an Executive Information System.

We also started to roll out a user-friendly computer model to support departments in measuring customer satisfaction. Already eight departments are implementing the system and feedback is encouraging.

The conference on "A Civil Service for Asia's World City" was held in January 2000, followed by a series of seminars. All events were well attended and the key message of the need for a transformation in the management and delivery of public services was successfully communicated to departments.

We also issued a Step-by-Step Guide to Performance Measurement which has been well received by departments and are now in the process of following up with a range of seminars and workshops to lock in best practice.

On the wider front, the EU has assisted a number of departments in exploiting technologies in the delivery of services, including helping the Post Office to develop a public key infrastructure. This led to the Certification Authority coming into effect in end-January 2000.

In respect of the specific targets set in 1999 for various performance indicators, we are pleased to report that they have all been achieved. For major programmes that post-implementation reviews were conducted, 70% of bureaux and departments have rated our services as effective and helpful in improving the management and delivery of public services. Feedback on other projects has also been positive. In addition, more than 70% of bureaux and departments we worked with in the past year have either agreed to implement our recommendations; or have instituted other improvement measures in the light of our recommendations. Over 80% of our projects were completed on time and over 90% of them completed within budget.

Progress on each previously announced initiative under the above KRAs is set out in the “Detailed Progress” section of this report.

Looking Forward

To achieve our overall targets this year, we will undertake the following initiatives and targets under each of the KRAs for the coming year.

Identify opportunities

The Efficiency Unit (EU) focuses its efforts on issues of particular concern to the community. We identify problems and opportunities by collecting information on current performance through surveys, through membership of high level groups, through a network of contacts across Government, and by responding to requests for assistance from policy bureaux and departments.

These opportunities and challenges whilst different from those facing the private sector and other governments, nonetheless have parallels in these sectors. The EU therefore monitors developments both within and outside Hong Kong, identifying approaches that have worked well and those that have not in order to assess what might work best in Hong Kong.

We will assess our performance in respect of this KRA against the following indicator –

- Evidence of an active investigation of opportunities and a programme of proposed developments. Our target is to identify three new opportunities during 2001.

We will pursue the following initiatives and targets to deliver results in this area –

| Initiative * | Target |
|---|--------------------------------|
| To scope the potential of an Executive Information System to provide a hierarchy of performance information from Policy Objectives to departmental initiatives (Efficiency Unit (EU)) | To complete study by June 2001 |

* the bracketed information denotes the agency with lead responsibility for the initiative

| Initiative | Target |
|--|---|
| To formulate a strategy for private sector involvement for the most efficient and effective delivery of services (EU) | To formulate strategy by March 2001 |
| To work with the Information Technology and Broadcasting Bureau (ITBB) to formulate a strategy for the innovative use of technology to radically improve the way services are managed and delivered (ITBB/EU) | To formulate strategy by March 2001 |
| To identify further opportunities to improve customer service and raise public sector productivity through best practice and stocktaking studies (EU) | To conduct three studies during 2001 |

Having identified problems and opportunities, and reviewed the potential application of best practices, the next step is to develop the broad direction and specific proposals to further improve public services. This requires the EU to demonstrate what can be achieved, how it can be achieved, and ensure that line management can take ownership of the project.

The EU also needs to ensure that more general levels of enthusiasm for public sector reform are maintained by communicating well with bureaux and departments, and by ensuring that appropriate support is available.

To achieve continuous improvement in the management and delivery of public services, the following programmes of work have been developed –

- Managing for Results : to clarify objectives and priorities, focus on results, ensure delivery of outcomes for the community, and measure performance
- Enhanced Productivity Programme : to achieve a lasting improvement in civil service productivity
- Customer Service Programme : to better understand customers' needs and improve the quality and timeliness of response
- Private Sector Involvement Programme : to optimise the private sector's contribution to service delivery to meet community needs
- A Government-wide Communications Programme : to build and maintain levels of enthusiasm and support the Serving the Community Programme

The EU acts as lead or facilitator for these programmes under high-level sponsorship, managing progress and piloting solutions before wider roll out. This ensures that the proposals are workable in practice, and that we have the hands-on experience to achieve successful implementation.

We will assess our performance in respect of this KRA against the following indicators –

- Evidence of successful proposals leading to both immediate change and wide adoption of the current initiatives. Our target is to develop three proposals with potential for broader application.
- Evidence of the public sector being aware of and understanding the change programme. Our target is to confirm through reviews and surveys that there is general acceptance of the need for change.

We will pursue the following initiatives and targets to deliver results in this area –

| Initiative | Target |
|---|---|
| To support the on-going programme of Fundamental Expenditure Reviews (FERs) of Policy Objectives to identify savings and re-deployment opportunities (Efficiency Unit (EU)) | To support three further FERs by end-2001 |
| To work with the Finance Bureau (FB) to develop proposals for transforming Government’s internal support services and to increase the visibility of costs to maximise value for money (FB/EU) | To develop two proposals by end-2001 |
| To work with the FB and the Civil Service Bureau (CSB) to develop proposals for introducing institutional change and more management flexibility (FB/CSB/EU) | To develop three proposals by end-2001 |

|---|--|
| To work with the Information Technology and Broadcasting Bureau (ITBB) to develop e-Government proposals pursuing business applications (ITBB/EU) | To develop the first group of proposals by mid-2001 |
| To develop proposals to extend the call centre concept beyond environmental hazards and cleanliness issues as a key driver to provide a life event (one-stop shop), customer-centric approach to service delivery (EU) | To develop proposals by end-2001 |
| To develop a mechanism to assess public sector productivity to provide high level measures and targets (EU) | To develop mechanism by end-2001 |
| To develop a mechanism for collection and collation of data on public sector productivity and community and customer satisfaction to provide an up-to-date picture on Government's performance (EU) | To develop mechanism by end-2001 |
| To carry out surveys to assess the level of understanding and support for Public Sector Reform (PSR) (EU) | To complete surveys by end-2001 |

| Initiative | Target |
|--|--|
| To develop new models and approaches for transforming the way the public and private sectors work together to deliver services (EU) | To develop two proposals during 2001 |
| To develop outsourcing/contracting out proposals to optimise private sector involvement with a view to help containing the size of the civil service (EU) | To develop a range of proposals during 2001 |

Successful implementation begins with developing sound solutions and building support and commitment. The Efficiency Unit (EU) has found its programme management approach to be most effective in terms of planning and implementation. Within each programme we have a mix of projects at scoping, development and implementation stages, brought together under clear objectives and accountability for delivery, and top level sponsorship within Government. Each project is delivered by a mixed project team including staff from the EU, the Management Services Agency and, where appropriate, consultant resources. The teams work in close partnership with respective policy bureaux and departments.

Our highest priority for implementation in the coming year will be the call centre, as well as following through proposals emerging from the earlier stages of the Enhanced Productivity Programme, and the Private Sector Involvement and the Managing for Results programmes. There are also a number of customer service initiatives being implemented during the year.

We will assess our performance in respect of this KRA against the following indicators –

- Evidence of developed proposals being adopted. Our target is to ensure that 80% of such proposals are adopted.
- Evidence of proposals achieving the intended results. Our target is to evaluate all major proposals to confirm that the intended results are broadly achieved.

We will pursue the following initiatives and targets to deliver results in this area –

| Initiative | Target |
|---|--|
| To implement the communications strategy to build and maintain enthusiasm and support for continuous improvement in public services (Efficiency Unit (EU)) | To apply the strategy to all programmes launched in 2001 |
| To provide support to policy bureaux in refining performance measures and targets (EU) | To provide assistance to all seeking help in time for the 2001 Policy Address |
| To improve performance measurement across Government departments through a series of workshops (EU) | To organise six workshops by December 2001 |
